This book is a revised version of my doctoral dissertation, defended at Heidelberg University in 2025. Its publication was facilitated by the generous financial support of the Heidelberger Akademie der Wissenschaften (Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities), as well as Ute Hüsken and Dominic Goodall, editors of the Sacred Sites of South Asia Series, to whom I extend my sincere thanks.

It is a great pleasure to thank people and institutions which have supported me on my academic and personal journey that has led to the realisation of this book. My deepest gratitude goes to my dissertation supervisor Ute Hüsken for her unwavering encouragement, for reading through all the drafts of my chapters, and the always valuable and constructive feedback. I appreciate her genuine interest in my research from the start and her infectious enthusiasm for Kanchipuram. With or without a hidden agenda, when I was in the topic-finding phase, she presented me with the then newly published book The Goddess's Embrace: Multifaceted Relations at the Ekāmaranātha Temple Festival in Kanchipuram by Kerstin Schier. Reading this wonderful study sparked my interest in Kanchipuram and made me delve into the glorifying Sanskrit texts on the city—an interest which has stayed with me ever since.

My sincere thanks to Jörg Gengnagel for his willingness to be my second supervisor and his valuable inputs on the structural approach of the dissertation, which helped me to crystallise my key ideas. I learnt Sanskrit from him when I started my studies and I appreciate that he continuously shared his expertise with me.

On the note of my academic beginnings, I wish to thank Mudagamuwe Maithrimurthi for teaching me Sanskrit and kindly taking the time to help and advise me throughout the years. I am also grateful to the researchers, fellow doctoral candidates, and staff at the Department of Cultural and Religious History of South Asia at the South Asia Institute of Heidelberg University for their support, inspiring exchange of ideas, and warm conversations.

Many thanks to Jonas Buchholz, Frank Grieshaber, Liudmila Olalde, and Aneesh Raghavan, my colleagues at the Hindu Temple Legends in South India research unit at the Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities in Heidelberg for a stimulating and enjoyable academic environment, fruitful conversations, and friendship. Special thanks go to Liudmila Olalde for her meticulous editorial comments on my work, for valuable inputs and help in designing the map materials. I would also like to extend my thanks to Jonas Buchholz for his careful reading of my work and many valuable suggestions. Moreover, I appreciate the thorough and expert proofreading of my thesis carried out by Maria Skakuj Puri.

At various conferences and at the colloquia of the Department of Cultural and Religious History of South Asia at Heidelberg University throughout the years, I have received valuable feedback from my colleagues which helped me refine my thoughts and my writing. Additionally, I would like to acknowledge the resources offered by the Heidelberg University, in particular the library of the Centre of Asian and Transcultural Studies with its excellent collection on South Asia. In Kanchipuram, I wish to thank N. Subramaniam for his help during my research field-visits to the city in 2020 and 2023.

I would like to thank the Studienstiftung des deutschen Volkes (German Academic Scholarship Foundation) for granting me an exposé scholarship to realise a six-months preparatory research phase prior to the doctorate in 2019 and a three-year doctoral scholarship from 2020 to 2022. Furthermore, I am grateful to the Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities for generous funding of conferences and research trips from 2023 to 2024.

My heartfelt thanks go out to my family and friends, both near and far, for good times away from the desk. I am grateful to my parents for opening the world to me, which inspired my interest particularly in India. Warm thanks to my godmother for advice on navigating the world of academia.

Lastly and wholeheartedly, a huge thank you to my life partner for being by my side and graciously accepting that the doctoral dissertation had absorbed me so thoroughly. He revived my spirits when times were difficult, always cheered me up, and helped me find fitting words whenever my brain was lost in a multilingual jungle. I am glad we can spend more time together from now on.
