

About the Authors and Contributors

Michel Wensing  <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-6569-8137>

Michel Wensing is full professor and lead of a Master of Science program for health services research and implementation science at the Medical Faculty of Heidelberg University, Germany. After graduation in social science, he received a doctoral degree in the medical sciences at Radboud University, Nijmegen, Netherlands. He has a broad interest and experience in health research, with a focus on primary healthcare and implementation science.

Charlotte Ullrich  <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-9757-913X>

Charlotte Ullrich is a post-doctoral researcher at the Department of General Practice and Health Services Research, Heidelberg University Hospital, Germany and the coordinator of a master program in health services research and implementation science at Heidelberg University. Trained as a social scientist, she holds a doctoral degree in sociology from Ruhr-University Bochum, Germany and received an habilitation at Heidelberg University. Research interests include medical sociology, reproductive health and qualitative research methods.

Katja Krug  <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-9795-7954>

Katja Krug is a post-doctoral researcher at the Department of General Practice and Health Services Research, Heidelberg University Hospital, Germany. She studied psychology (Dipl.) at Freie Universität, Berlin and statistics (B.Sc.) at Freie Universität and Humboldt University, Berlin and received a doctoral degree in human sciences at Heidelberg University. Her research interests include health care issues of caregivers and patients at the end of life, quality of life (assessment), interprofessional education, and development of assessment instruments.

Regina Poß-Doering  <https://orcid.org/0000-0003-0618-4034>

Regina Poß-Doering is a post-doctoral researcher at the Department of General Practice and Health Services Research, University Hospital Heidelberg, Germany, where she engages in process evaluations. Trained as a health scientist in health promotion, health services research and implementation science, she holds a doctoral degree in health services research from Heidelberg University, Germany. Research interests include health services research, implementation science and qualitative research methods.